

Name:

Email:

Info:

I use JS to set some fields, empty default values,... when document action "will print" initiated.
=> print to PDF

When printing is finished, the document action "did print" set again some form fields.

The problem is: When user cancel printing (for example abort saving print to PDF, the document action "will print" executed, but the "did print" action not executed. So the form stock between "will print" and "did print".